

Bay

Laurus nobilis

In Greek mythology Bay symbolises strength, courage and wisdom. It makes a muscle oil fit for Olympians... and weary travellers.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Burdock

Arctium lappa

Paired with Dandelion since the Middle Ages. Initially a medicinal mild mead and later a fermented root extract which is the origin of the carbonated soft drink Dandelion and Burdock.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Chamomile

Matricaria chamomilla

The best known of all herbal teas. Promotes sleep, eases teething pain and tummy upsets in children. A gentle yet powerful digestive remedy historically known as Mother of the Gut.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Chilli

Capsicum spp.

Chillies achieve some of their therapeutic effect by stimulating the immune system into defending the body - for example a runny nose following a chilli rich meal. When applied topically it brings the blood supply to the surface.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Comfrey

Symphytum officinale

Historically known as Knitbone. Great for bruises, sprains and joint inflammation. Speeds healing so effectively, avoid in deeper wounds where tissue needs to heal from the inside outwards.?

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Daisy

Bellis perennis

Expectorant effect if drunk as tea; expelling sticky phlegm. Also known as Bruisewort, it is a first aid remedy applied as a topical ointment on bruises and sprains.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Dandelion

Taraxacum officinale

One of the most widely used plants in Western Herbal Medicine. Herbalists often separate the plant parts into two distinct medicines. The root for the digestion, liver and bowel, and the leaf as a stimulating diuretic.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Echinacea (Purple Cone Flower)

Echinacea purpurea

The subject of much scientific investigation, an understanding of the medicinal properties of this plant is rooted deeply within the traditional knowledge of many different Native American communities.?

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Elder

Sambucus nigra

Shrouded in much myth, magic and folklore, it has long been considered bad luck to cut or burn an Elder. Indeed, the whole tree is a medicine chest.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Elecampane

Inula Helenium

Traditionally known as Elfwort, due to its capacity to protect against Elf darts! The strongly aromatic bitter roots are an antimicrobial lung restorative. Considered to be strengthening to the vital spirit.?

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Fennel

Foeniculum vulgare

Helps stimulate milk flow in breast feeding. A digestive tonic, so it is great for colic in babies and grownups.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Hawthorn

Crataegus spp.

Found locally in towns, gardens, parks, hedgerows, woods... also on lonely moors, remote mountains, inhospitable places. Quintessential medicine for the heart.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Herb Bennet

Geum urbanum

Also known as Clove Root, the strong tasting roots are fiddly to harvest, but plentiful. This herb was used during the Black Death as an anti-plague remedy.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Herb Robert

Geranium robertianum

Astringent and haemostatic. Makes a lovely infused vinegar - double infuse to achieve a good strength. Associated with capricious and playful fairy folk... uproot at your peril!

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Horseradish

Armoracia rusticana

Heating and invigorating. A powerful circulatory stimulant. The UK indigenous Wasabi.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Ivy

Hedera helix

Unrelated to the American plant, Poison Ivy... European Ivy is expectorant and breaks up mucus; a good herb for respiratory infections.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Lavender

Lavandula angustifolia

Calming, just by the nature of the volatile oils that create the familiar smell, it reduces anxiety and promotes sleep as a tea. The essential oil is brilliant for burns.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Lemon Balm

Melissa officinalis

Uplifting to the mood, helpful for anxiety and specifically anti-viral to cold sores and chickenpox. The tea is refreshing served cold with ice on a summers day!

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Liquorice

Glycyrrhiza glabra

Significant in herbal traditions across the world. Supportive of adrenal glands and immune system; a valuable tonic when coping with stress/burnout. Avoid when blood pressure is high.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Marigold (Pot Marigold)

Calendula officinalis

Easy to grow, abundant to harvest. The sunny yellow/orange flowers infused in oil can make a simple anti-microbial, anti-fungal ointment which speeds up tissue healing.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Marshmallow

Althaea officinalis

This beautiful medicinal plant, uncommon in the wild but easy to grow, was the main ingredient for the original marshmallows which were soothing cough sweets or digestive tonics.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Meadowsweet

Filipendula ulmaria

Meadowsweet leaves and flowers contain anti-inflammatory, aspirin like chemicals called salicylates. It is calming and soothing to the digestive system without causing the damage that aspirin can.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Mugwort

Artemisia vulgaris

Found growing by roadsides, flowering around midsummer. It has an affinity to the womb and menstrual cycle, and is said to help with pathfinding in life and in dreams.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Peppermint

Mentha x piperita

Cooling Peppermint: refreshing in tea, calming and soothing in topical creams, delicious as an ingredient in salads and sauces.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Plantain (ribwort and broadleaf)

Plantago lanceolata and Plantago major Anti-microbial, anticatarral, tissue repairing. Mentioned in a 10th century Anglo Saxon herbal for its wound healing properties.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Raspberry

Rubus idaeus

Delicious fruits, but it is the leaves that are used as medicine. The tea is used in the last trimester of pregnancy, after birth and to reduce heavy menstrual bleeding.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Rosemary

Salvia rosmarinus?

Rosemary for Remembrance is reflected in modern investigations which have found the leaves to increase cerebral circulation.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Sage

Salvia officinalis

The tea can be used as an anti microbial gargle and may be drunk to relieve night sweats associated with the menopause.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

St. John's wort

Hypericum perforatum

A plant of the midsummer. Works to support the nervous system in many ways. Great externally for physical nerve pain and to help repair nerve damage.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Stinging Nettle

Urtica dioica

The characteristic sting is a surprising medicine; it can help relieve painful, arthritic joints by causing an acute reaction which can alleviate long term inflammation.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Thyme

Thymus vulgaris

Thyme is anti-microbial and expectorant and is an excellent herb to help clear lung infections. Bees love the flowers and thyme honey is a delicious remedy.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Valerian

Valeriana officinalis

Relaxing to smooth muscle, also good for promoting sleep and relaxation. Cats love Valerian!

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Willow

Salix species

Willow is a plant woven deep in to European tradition - as a material for making fences and baskets and as a medicine.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info

Yarrow

Achillea millefolium

Works on the capillaries and has the seemingly contradictory ability to prevent bleeding and also stimulate blood flow.

www.plantsfromthisland.org

scan here for more info